

He has overseen an historic rise over the last few years, including a trio of seasons in which Princeton improved by at least two wins — a feat unmatched ever in the Ivy League.

He guided Princeton to its ninth Ivy League title and its first nine-win season since the mid-1960s.

He was a finalist for the Eddie Robinson Head Coach of the Year Award.

But he is not satisfied. Yesterdays are just that.

Today and tomorrow are always his concerns.

HEAD COACH ROGER HUGHES

THE COACHING STAFF

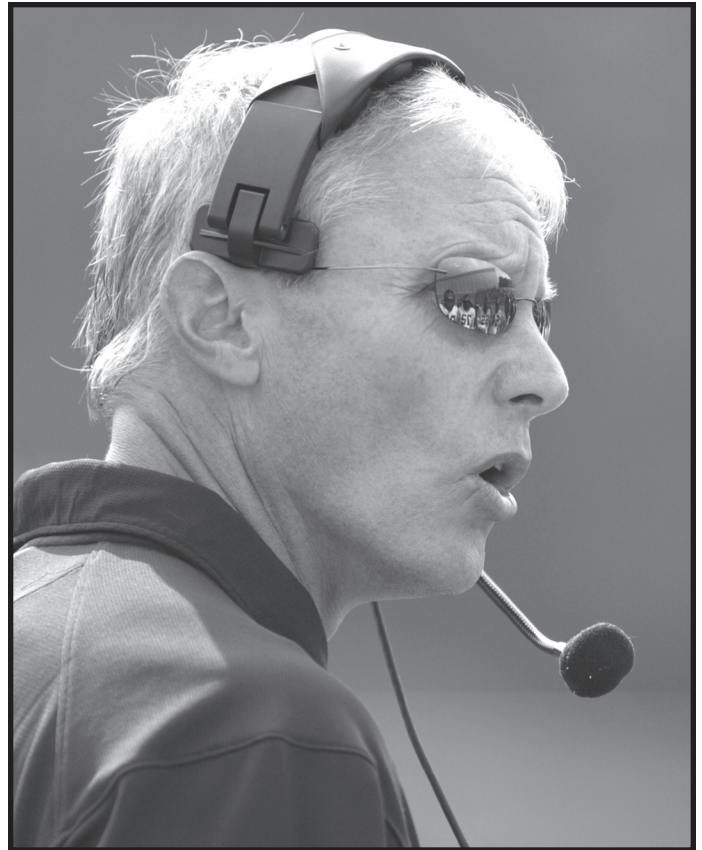

Roger Hughes

THE CHARLES W. CALDWELL JR. '25
HEAD COACH OF PRINCETON FOOTBALL
NINTH SEASON • DOANE '82

Roger Hughes, the Charles W. Caldwell Jr. '25 Head Coach of Football at Princeton University, has guided Princeton football back into the Ivy League elite, and he has put together some historic numbers in recent years. Of course, Hughes is more interested in the present and future, and he is ready to compete for a second Ivy championship in three years during the 2008 season.

An Eddie Robinson Award finalist for Division I-AA Coach of the Year in 2006, Hughes led a Princeton squad that was picked to finish sixth in the preseason media poll to a 9-1 record and the 2006 Ivy League title. The nine wins were the most at Princeton since 1964 and the league title was the first for the Orange and Black in more than a decade.

Hughes, who has improved Princeton's winning percentage in six of the last eight seasons and is the only coach in the history of Ivy League football to improve a team by at least two wins in three straight seasons, guided Princeton to the 2006 title despite starting an entirely new offensive line and linebacking corps. His offense finished first in the Ivies in both passing yards and total yards, and his senior quarterback, Jeff Terrell, became Princeton's first Bushnell Cup winner (Ivy League Player of the Year) since 1995. Terrell became only the second Princeton quarterback to win the award; the other is longtime NFL quarterback and current Dallas Cowboys offensive coordinator Jason Garrett. Princeton rallied to win five games it trailed in the second half, four games it trailed in the fourth quarter and two games it trailed in the final five minutes. The highlight win of the season was a 34-31 win at Yale, when Princeton rallied from a trio of 14-point deficits and threw for 446 yards in a thriller. That win clinched Princeton's first were All-Ivy picks and eventually invited to NFL mini-camps, were lost for the season, Princeton has won 33 of its last 52 games (63.5%).

Under Hughes, 24 Tigers have earned first-team All-Ivy honors, and 50 others have been named to either the second team or earned honorable mention. His highest number came in 2005, when 10 Princeton players earned All-Ivy honors. He also had a pair of All-Americans in Jay McCareins, a Buck Buchanan finalist for Defensive Player of the Year, and Colin McDonough.

He has also had significant success helping his players move to the next level; within one month after the 2006 NFL Draft, four members of the Class of 2006 (Ben Brielmaier, Jon Dekker, Jay McCareins and Justin Stull) had

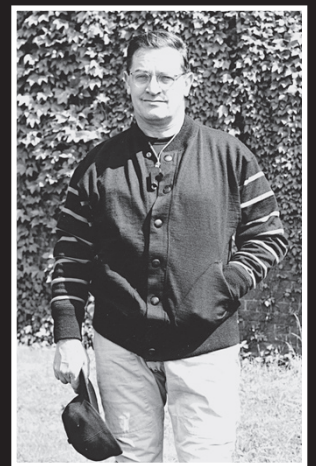

Charles W. Caldwell Jr. '25 Football Coaching Endowment

Through gifts from nearly two dozen donors, $1.2 million was raised to establish the Charles W. Caldwell Jr. '25 Football Coaching Endowment in 1986. This became the second endowed coaching position at Princeton. The first, created in 1984, was the Franklin C. Cappon-Edward G. Green '40 basketball coaching position, now held by Sydney Johnson.

Head coach Roger Hughes is the third incumbent of the post created by the Caldwell endowment.

As an undergraduate Caldwell was a member of Bill Roper's famous 1922 "Team of Destiny." As head coach at Princeton from 1945 until his death in 1957, he compiled a 70-30-3 record (.694) and led Princeton to six successive Big Three championships between 1947 and 1952.

Caldwell's 1950 and 1951 teams posted undefeated 9-0 records that were part of a 24-game winning streak (1949-1952). Both teams were awarded the Lambert Trophy as Eastern champions. Caldwell was inducted into the College Football Hall of Fame in 1961.

WHAT THEY'VE SAID ABOUT COACH HUGHES

"Coach Hughes has a great offensive mind, and he prepared me very well for the next level. I think he's very creative offensively. He communicates very well with his players. He doesn't go out and demand respect; he earns it."

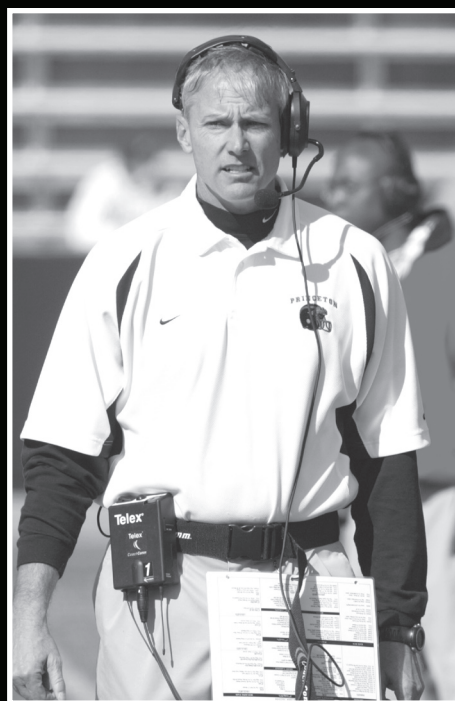

— Jay Fiedler
former NFL quarterback, Dartmouth alum

"Coach Hughes coaches the sport with everything he has, both emotionally and physically. We as players would always know he was working hard for us and that he enjoyed the game and the thrill of winning just as much, if not more, than all of us."

— Jeff Terrell '07
2006 Bushnell Cup winner

"Dr. Roger Hughes looks like he was born for the job, bred for the job, fated for the job. It's easy to see how the Tigers' family is swept away by Hughes. He's exceptionally bright in a profession where that is not necessarily a common denominator. He combines an open, boyish charm with a mature sense of responsibility that also isn't necessarily common among football coaches."

— Harvey Yavener
The Times of Trenton

signed with NFL teams. One season earlier, three departing seniors were invited to mini-camps, and Zak Keasey would eventually sign and play for the Washington Redskins. 2006 Bushnell Cup winner Jeff Terrell signed with the Kansas City Chiefs within hours of the 2006 NFL Draft.

In 2005, Hughes' offense led the league in red-zone efficiency and was in the top three in turnover margin and third-down conversion percentage. He specifically works with the Princeton quarterbacks, and his success is evident in the record books. Under his tutelage, three quarterbacks (David Splithoff '04, Matt Verbit '05 and Jeff Terrell '07) have placed in the top six in all-time passing at Princeton. In 2004, Verbit became the second Princeton quarterback to throw for more than 5,000 yards in his career. He moved past

Garrett into second place on the Princeton list. Terrell, among the national leaders in passing offense and total offense last season, broke into the Princeton Top 5 in single-game passing yards (Yale, 445), single-season passing yards (2,445) and single-season total yards (2,717).

Hughes was named head coach at Princeton in January 2000, and he took a team starting 10 freshmen and sophomores to a 3-7 record in his first season. Along the way Princeton improved its Ivy League record by two games, to 3-4, and defeated a pair of 7-3 teams, Brown and Yale. Hughes coached three players in his first season at Princeton who signed NFL contracts, including one, Ross Tucker, who started for the Dallas Cowboys in 2002 and later for the Buffalo Bills.

Hughes again went 3-4 in the Ivy League the next season, 2001, and Princeton showed its future potential with a pair of 20-point wins to close out the season. That stretch was a sign of things to come in 2002, when Princeton went 6-4. The Tigers showed poise and resiliency that season, rallying in the fourth quarter to win four games.

Hughes has coached 74 All-Ivy League players, including 24 first-team selections, and several All-America selections. He has also coached nine District II Academic All-Americans, three Roper Trophy winners for the top senior male athlete at Princeton and two of the four winners of the 2000 National Football Foundation Scholar-Athlete Award. During the 2002 season, running back Cameron Atkinson was one of 14 overall winners of the National Scholar-Athlete Scholarship, and he was the lone winner from the Ivy League.

MEET HEAD COACH ROGER HUGHES

Hughes, who holds a Ph.D. from the University of Nebraska, came to Princeton after nearly a decade as offensive coordinator at Dartmouth, where he led an offense that propelled the Big Green to a 22-game winning streak and two Ivy League championships. While at Dartmouth, he helped develop Jay Fiedler into an NFL quarterback.

Hughes helped the Big Green to Ivy League championships in 1992 and 1996. He coached players who set 14 of the top 15 school single-game passing and total yardage records, as well as four of the top five single-season totals. The 1996 team went 10-0, one of four teams in league history to do so.

Hughes is a product of the football-mad state of Nebraska, where he grew up in tiny Crawford, population 1,115. A three-sport athlete at Crawford High School, Hughes attended Nebraska Western Junior College on a basketball scholarship. He left after one year to attend Doane College in Crete, Neb., where he played football as a tight end and golf before graduating in 1982.

He began his coaching career at Doane as he began his graduate work at Nebraska the following year. He then moved to Lincoln as a graduate assistant, helping the Cornhuskers to the 1984 Sugar Bowl and the 1985 Fiesta Bowl while working on his doctorate. He continued his career at Doane again, as offensive coordinator in 1987, and he earned his Ph.D. in exercise physiology from Nebraska in 1987.

His career then took him to the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater, where as running backs coach he helped his team to a conference championship and a berth in the NCAA Division III quarterfinals. His next stop was Cameron University in Lawton, Okla., where he spent three years as offensive coordinator and strength and conditioning coach. While at Cameron he also worked with the quarterbacks and the offensive line before leaving in 1992 to join John Lyons' staff at Dartmouth.

Hughes, 48, is married to the former Laura Van Werden, a certified public accountant. The couple has a daughter, Maddison, age 12.

Dave Rackovan

OFFENSIVE COORDINATOR
RUNNING BACKS
NINTH SEASON • MILLERSVILLE '73

Dave Rackovan, a veteran of 22 seasons of Ivy League football coaching, enters his ninth season as offensive coordinator at Princeton. He is also the coach of the running backs.

Rackovan helped develop the 2006 Princeton offense into one of the most explosive in the Ivy League. The Tigers ranked first in total offense and passing offense, third in scoring offense and fourth in rushing offense that season, despite starting five new offensive linemen.

As the running backs coach, Rackovan has helped develop a handful of top performers in recent years, including last season. Junior Jordan Culbreath exploded on the scene late last season and was featured on SportsCenter's "Top Plays" after rushing for 145 yards and two touchdowns in a home win over Cornell. Senior R.C. Lagomarsino and junior Kenny Gunter both started at times last season and had big efforts in wins over Lafayette and Columbia.

In 2002, Cameron Atkinson raced from Rackovan's backfield to unanimous first-team All-Ivy honors. He ended his career ranked third all-time at Princeton in rushing yardage, trailing only legendary rushers Keith Elias and Judd Garrett. Since then, Jon Veach and Rob Toresco have also earned All-Ivy honors during their respective senior seasons.

Rackovan spent six seasons at Penn and eight at Dartmouth before moving to Princeton with Roger Hughes, Dartmouth's former offensive coordinator. Rackovan worked with the running backs and was the special teams coordinator at Dartmouth.

Before joining the Penn staff in 1986, Rackovan was wide receivers/tight ends coach for two seasons at Indiana (Pa.). From 1976-83 he was head coach at Purchase Line High in Commodore, Pa. A 1973 Millersville graduate, Rackovan started at various times at wide receiver and quarterback.

Rackovan and his wife Marjean, an elementary school teacher in the Philadelphia school district, have a son David and a daughter Anita. David is a member of the U.S. Army 10th Special Forces Group, the Green Berets. He is currently on his 2nd deployment in Iraq. Anita graduated from Princeton in 2006 and won an NCAA championship with the women's lacrosse team in 2003. She is an English teacher and the head girl's lacrosse coach at Norfolk Academy.

Steve Verbit

DEFENSIVE COORDINATOR
DEFENSIVE LINE
24TH SEASON • DELAWARE '73

Steve Verbit is in his 24th season at Princeton, the last 14 of which he has spent as defensive coordinator. Verbit also coaches the defensive line.

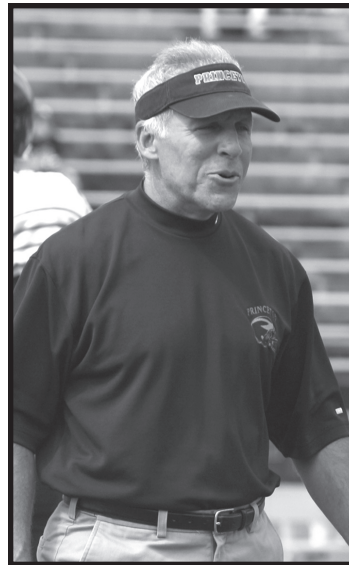

This could be a special season for the Princeton defensive line, which returns a trio of starters. Senior Pete Buchignani won the team award for top defensive freshman in 2005 and has anchored one end of the line throughout his career. Classmate Tom Methvin has battled injuries, but should provide a strong presence on the other side of the line. Nose guard Matt Koch was named a tri-captain by his teammates after a strong pair of seasons.

Verbit helped develop a dominant defense during the 2006 championship season, despite significant losses in both the linebacking and secondary positions. Princeton ranked second in the Ivy League in rushing, passing and scoring defense and put four players on the All-Ivy team, including lineman Jake Marshall. It also finished first in the Ivy League in both first downs allowed and third-down conversions. Teams converted fewer than 28% of their third-down opportunities against the Tigers.

Before the 2004 season, Verbit helped engineer a change to a 3-4 defense to better utilize the depth of linebackers on the roster. Prior to coming to Princeton, Verbit coached at Delaware for six seasons. He helped guide the Blue Hens to the Division II national championship in 1979.

Verbit is a Delaware graduate, having received his bachelor's degree in physical education in 1977 and his master's degree in exercise physiology in 1980.

A native of Pottstown, Pa., Verbit coached the offensive and defensive backs at Pottstown High School in 1977. In 1978 he taught health education at Caesar Rodney High School in Camden, Del., while serving as an assistant football coach and head track coach. After joining the Delaware staff, he spent two seasons as defensive coordinator for the freshman football team before taking over the defensive secondary of the varsity. Verbit also is the director of the Tiger Football Camps in the Princeton area.

He and his wife Vicki are parents of a son Matt and a daughter Kristin. Matt graduated in 2005 as the No. 2 passer all-time at Princeton while Kristin is a senior on the Villanova women's soccer team.

Don Dobes

RUN DEFENSE COORDINATOR
LINEBACKERS
15TH SEASON • ILLINOIS WESLEYAN '79

Don Dobes, a 1979 graduate of Illinois Wesleyan, is in his 15th year as the Tigers' linebackers coach. He added the title of run defense coordinator in 2000, and he recently graduated one of the finest groups of linebackers in the recent history of the program. A senior-laden group, including first-team All-Ivy selections Justin Stull and Abi Fadeyi, helped Princeton finish as the No. 1 scoring defense in the league in 2005.

Stull went on to be signed by the Washington Redskins in the offseason. He was the second former Dobes' protege in as many years to sign in the NFL, as 2004 first-team All-Ivy pick Zak Keasey also signed with the Redskins and now plays for the San Francisco 49ers.

During the 2006 championship season, Dobes put together a cast of new starting linebackers, including eventual All-Ivy selection Brig Walker, 2006 co-captain Luke Steckel and 2007 co-captain Jon Stem. Walker and 2007 first-team All-Ivy selection Tim Boardman shared the team lead in tackles that season, and Boardman led the team in stops again last season.

During the last 14 seasons, Dobes has developed one of most highly respected and honored units in the Ivy League. Under his direction a total of 22 Tiger linebackers have earned All-Ivy recognition, including 1995 Bushnell Cup winner Dave Patterson. In addition, 10 of the last 14 Princeton defensive captains have been linebackers.

Dobes has coached the Ivy League leader in tackles in two of the last five seasons. Stull led the Ivy League with 114 tackles in 2003 and would have led the league in 2004 with 106 tackles if not for Keasey, who led all Ivy players with 127 tackles.

Dobes came to Princeton after helping Rowan to the 1993 NCAA Division III championship game. Before his stint at Rowan, he was the offensive coordinator at Temple for four years and spent three seasons in a similar capacity at Rice.

Dobes coached at Penn from 1981 to 1986, spending his first three seasons as head freshman coach and compiling a 15-3 record. He then coached the linebackers and offensive linemen/tight ends, helping to turn a struggling program into four-time Ivy league champions.

A two-year letterwinner as well as an all-conference and academic all-state selection at Illinois Wesleyan, Dobes began his playing career at Northern Michigan, where he was part of a Division II national championship team of 1975. Dobes earned his bachelor's degree in physical education before receiving a master of arts in education from DePauw University in 1983.

Dobes, who lives in Riverside, N.J., has four children: Stefanie, who graduated from Princeton in 2007, Russell, a junior at Johns Hopkins University, Kevin, a sophomore defensive back on the Princeton football team, and Trent, a junior at Delran High School.

Eric Jackson

DEFENSIVE BACKS
NINTH SEASON
EASTERN MICHIGAN '87

Eric Jackson enters his ninth season coaching the defensive backs at Princeton. He oversaw the development of first-team All-America selection Jay McCareins in 2005. A three-time All-Ivy selection during his career, McCareins led the nation in interceptions that season, earned National Defensive Player of the Week honors after recording three interceptions in a game and went on to sign a free-agent deal with the Arizona Cardinals after the season.

Jackson coached a pair of first-team All-Ivy selections during the Ivy League championship season of 2006 in Tim Strickland, who started every game of his career, and J.J. Artis. Both were named Ivy League Defensive Player of the Week after multiple-interception games in 2006. The 2006 passing defense was ranked second in the Ivy League, allowing only 185.2 yards per game. In 2002, prior to the arrival of Artis and Strickland, all four of Jackson's starters earned All-Ivy recognition.

Jackson has also worked with the Princeton special teams throughout his tenure and helped Greg Fields become one of the top all-purpose players in the nation in 2004. Both Fields and McCareins were also critical in the return game.

Jackson played at Eastern Michigan in the mid-'80s before turning to coaching after graduation in 1987. His first job was at the high school from which he graduated, Ypsilanti High School near Ann Arbor, Mich.

He moved to the college level, first at Cincinnati from 1987-88 and then at Cornell, where he helped the Big Red to the 1990 Ivy League title. He served as secondary coach at Idaho in 1993, when the Vandals advanced to the Division I-AA semifinals before losing to eventual champion Youngstown State.

Jackson has had coaching internships with the Detroit Lions and Carolina Panthers, and he spent three seasons as the defensive coordinator at Cal Poly. He rejoined the staff at Cornell for one year before moving crosstown to Ithaca.

Jackson has a son Davis and a daughter Brooks.

JACKSON'S RECRUITING AREAS ...

Washington, Kentucky, Oregon, Michigan, New York, Ohio and Tennessee

Scott Sallach

PASS GAME COORDINATOR
WIDE RECEIVERS/QUARTERBACKS
SIXTH SEASON • URSINUS '94

Scott Sallach begins his sixth year as wide receivers coach at Princeton, and he continues to work with the Princeton special teams units. He has also been given the responsibility of pass game coordinator. He returns a plethora of experienced receivers this season, including senior tri-captain Adam Berry and classmate Will Thanheiser.

This will be Sallach's second straight season coaching a Princeton captain. Prior to Berry, Sallach coached Brendan Circle, a 2006 first-team All-Ivy selection who led the Ivy League in receiving yards per game and ranked second in receptions per game that season. Circle finished his career ranked sixth on the all-time Princeton receptions list with 105 catches, and his 12-catch performance at Yale tied for eighth-best in a single game at Princeton.

Circle was injured for much of last season, which allowed Sallach more time to work with current sophomores Trey Peacock and Matt Ransom. Peacock earned the team's top offensive freshman honor last season, and both he and Ransom played significant snaps most of November.

Before coming to Princeton, Sallach had been at Dartmouth for five seasons, coaching the wide receivers and assisting with the special teams, specializing in kickoffs and kickoff returns. He also assisted in recruiting during his five years at Dartmouth and was the summer camp director. Sallach worked with Roger Hughes and Dave Rackovan before the two of them came to Princeton prior to the 2000 season.

Sallach, who graduated from Ursinus in 1994 with a degree in exercise and sport science, took his first football job at Hamilton College in 1994 as an assistant coach. After one season there, he spent three years at Monmouth as an assistant coach. In both positions, Sallach was responsible for coaching wide receivers.

SALLACH'S RECRUITING AREAS ...

Arizona, New Jersey (Monmouth and Ocean counties), Oklahoma and Texas

Adam Hollis

RUN GAME COORDINATOR
OFFENSIVE LINE
SECOND SEASON • ALBANY '90

Adam Hollis, a former assistant coach at Dartmouth who worked one season with Roger Hughes while he was the Big Green offensive coordinator, is in his second season at Princeton. He assumes the role of offensive line coach after spending his first season as the tight ends coach. Hollis assisted former assistant Gregg Perry with the Princeton offensive line during his first year.

Hollis joined the Dartmouth staff in 1999 as the tight ends coach and eventually coached the Big Green running backs after current Princeton offensive coordinator Dave Rackovan came to Princeton. Under Hollis' guidance, Mike Gratch became Dartmouth's first running back to average 100 yards per game since the 1992 season.

He also coordinated Dartmouth's recruiting efforts and helped land eventual captains from the 2006 and 2007 teams, including first-team All-Ivy selection Justin Cottrell.

Prior to his arrival at Dartmouth, he coached the tight ends at Rhode Island, where he worked with current executive director of the Black Coaches Association Floyd Keith. Hollis also worked with former Penn offensive coordinator and offensive line coach Dick Maloney at the University of Chicago. Hollis' coaching career began at Concordia University, where he coached the secondary.

A graduate of the University at Albany in 1990, Hollis was a defensive back before his playing career ended after one year due to a back injury. He began his coaching career as an assistant at his high school alma mater, Walt Whitman, in Huntington, N.Y.

Hollis has a wife Laura and a daughter, Carolyn Shea.

HOLLIS' RECRUITING AREAS ...

Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Maryland, New Jersey (Middlesex and Somerset counties), Virginia and Washington D.C.

Matt Borich

DEFENSIVE LINEMEN
FIFTH SEASON
BUCKNELL '01

Matt Borich is in his fifth season at Princeton. He works with Steve Verbit coaching the defensive line and has helped develop the talented senior trio of Pete Buchignani, Tom Methvin and Matt Koch, all of whom have started for at least two years. Buchignani and Koch were both 2007 All-Ivy selections, and Koch was voted as a tri-captain for the 2008 season.

Borich served as a defensive assistant at Lafayette in 2003, where he worked with the defensive ends during the fall and the entire defensive line in the spring. He spent the previous two seasons as a defensive assistant at Dickinson College, where he coached the outside linebackers. His defensive responsibilities included breaking down game film and producing scouting reports.

A native of Selinsgrove, Pa., Borich was a three-year letterwinner at Bucknell, where he played outside linebacker and on the defensive line. He received his bachelor's degree in economics in 2001.

BORICH'S RECRUITING AREAS ...

Canada, Wisconsin, Iowa, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, New Jersey (Bergen, Essex, Hudson, Passaic and Union counties), North Dakota, South Dakota, Rhode Island and Minnesota

Chris Mosley

TIGHT ENDS
FIRST SEASON
WASHINGTON & JEFFERSON '01

Chris Mosley, a former graduate assistant coach at Boston College, is in his first year as the tight ends coach at Princeton. He takes over for Adam Hollis, who is now the Princeton offensive line coach.

Mosley went to Boston College in January 2007 to work as the assistant offensive line coach for head coach Jeff Jagodzinski. His responsibilities included preparing offensive video cut-ups, defensive scout tapes and individual practice plans, as well as recruiting efforts in several states, including Texas. During his year with the Eagles, Boston College won 11 games for the first time since 1940 and won the Champs Sports Bowl over Michigan State.

Mosley has also served as an assistant football coach at Villanova, Akron and Washington & Jefferson. He also worked as a strength and conditioning coach with both Washington & Jefferson and Notre Dame, as well as a minor league affiliate of the Cincinnati Reds.

Mosley, who earned his degree in sociology, was a running back at Southeast Missouri State before transferring and finishing his career at Washington & Jefferson.

E.J. Henderson

DEFENSIVE BACKS
SECOND SEASON
CENTRAL WASHINGTON '96

E.J. Henderson is in his second season working with the defensive backs. He formerly served as the wide receivers coach and special teams coordinator at Wayne State in Michigan. During his last year at Wayne State, the team recorded its first winning record in 13 seasons.

Henderson, who served an internship program with the Detroit Lions in the summer of 2005 and worked with the Washington Redskins in the summer of 2008, spent two years as the defensive backfield coach for Division III power Mt. Union. He coached an All-America selection in Chris Kern and helped lead Mt. Union to a national championship in 2002. Prior to that, Henderson was a graduate assistant coach at Louisville. He worked with the wide receivers and special teams during consecutive Conference USA championship seasons for the Cardinals.

Henderson played at Central Washington, where he graduated in 1996 with a degree in travel/tourism management. The 1995 CWU squad shared the NAIA title and was inducted into the school's Hall of Fame. He earned his master's of education in health and fitness at Louisville in 2002.

Alan Dandar

DIRECTOR OF FOOTBALL OPERATIONS
FIRST SEASON
PENN STATE '04

Alan Dandar, the former special assistant to the recruiting coordinator at Temple, is in his first year as the Princeton director of football operations. He replaces Mike Fassel, who left Princeton after the 2007 season to work in real estate.

Dandar spent a year at Temple, where, under head coach Al Golden, his responsibilities ranged from creating recruiting mailers and marketing pieces to assisting with practice and coordinating video presentations for the coaching staff and team. His extensive computer knowledge allowed him to assist the athletic department with fundraising efforts and game promotions, which led to both single-game and total season attendance records.

Prior to his time at Temple, Dandar worked with the Philadelphia Eagles and for the department of basketball statistics with the Philadelphia 76ers under Hall of Fame statistician Harvey Pollack. He has also worked with the Comcast Spectacor corporation and the IBM software group.

Dandar earned a computer science degree at Penn State in 2004 and earned his MBA at Drexel in 2006. He married his wife, Kristen, in the spring of 2008.

Charlie

HEAD ATHLETIC

Charlie Thompson enters his 10th year as Princeton's head athletic trainer. He serves as the primary athletic trainer for the football and baseball teams and the men's crews.

Thompson came to Princeton from Maine, where he served as head athletic trainer from 1977-99. Before that Thompson was an assistant athletic trainer at Penn State, where he worked with the football team for six years. He was with the Nittany Lions in 1994, when Penn State went 12-0 and won the Rose Bowl while finishing second nationally.

Thompson has also served as head athletic trainer at Rhode Island and Pittsburgh and was at Princeton previously from 1982-85.

Thompson is a member of the National Athletic Trainers' Association and the Athletic Training Society of New Jersey. He is the president of the Eastern Athletic Trainers' Association.

Thompson and his wife Sandy, an office manager for a dental group, have a son Colin, who graduated from N.Y.U., and a daughter, Ashley, who graduated from Emerson College.

George
O'Neil

George O'Neil is in his 19th year as an athletic trainer at Princeton, during which he has worked extensively with the football team.

In addition to football, O'Neil currently serves as athletic trainer for the men's lacrosse team. He also served as one of the two athletic trainers for the victorious USA teams at the 1998 and 2002 World Championships of men's lacrosse.

O'Neil was a physical education/athletic training major as an undergraduate at Brockport State, and he earned a master's degree in athletic training from Ohio. He is a member of the National Athletic Trainers Association.

O'Neil and his wife Dana, a sportswriter for ESPN.com, live in Yardley, Pa., with their daughter Madigan and their son Kieran.

Jason Gallucci

STRENGTH & CONDITIONING

Jason Gallucci is in his ninth year at Princeton and his seventh as the head varsity strength coach for both football and basketball.

Head coach Roger Hughes has consistently credited Gallucci for much of the recent success of the football team, which includes the 2006 Ivy League title.

Gallucci also oversees the strength training facilities in Princeton Stadium, Jadwin Gym and Baker Rink while working directly with many of Princeton's 38 varsity programs. He runs a staff of four strength coaches.

Gallucci came to Princeton after three years as a graduate assistant strength and conditioning coach for the Penn State football team. He also volunteered as the head strength coach for Penn State's boxing team and coached three individual national champions.

Gallucci is a graduate of Penn State and was a member of the 1994 Nittany Lion team that won the Rose Bowl and finished 12-0. He and his wife Angelique live in Cranbury with their son, Jason, and daughter, Sorella.

Clifton
Perry

EQUIPMENT MANAGER

Clifton Perry is in his fifth year as the head equipment manager at Princeton.

He has been a certified member of the Athletic Equipment Managers Association since 2003. This past spring, Perry was named the District I Athletic Equipment Manager of the Year, and he serves as the District I Assistant Director. Perry has also been a speaker at the national convention.

Perry graduated from Roanoke College in 1992 with a degree in health and physical education. Before arriving at Princeton, he served as an intern equipment manager at the Naval Academy. Prior to that, he was an equipment manager, teacher and coach for 11 years in Palm Beach County, Florida.

Perry, who spent three years as a deacon at the First Presbyterian Church in North Palm Beach, and his wife, Jennifer, have a 6-year-old daughter Hope.

Stacie
Traube

ASSISTANT

Stacie Traube is entering her 25th year at Princeton and her 19th in the football office.

Traube works with head coach Roger Hughes, maintaining his daily schedules and managing the football office. She also assists the offensive and defensive staffs in their recruiting and game week preparations.

Traube began her career at Princeton in the politics department. She and husband Jim have two children, Michael and Jennifer. Jim has worked for the University for the past six years. Along with her family, Stacie has attended every home game in her tenure with the Tigers.

Ed Benkin

RADIO PLAY-BY-PLAY

Ed Benkin, who has been broadcasting Tiger athletics since 1995, is the football play-by-play announcer for the Princeton radio network.

Benkin works as a sports anchor and reporter for KYW-1060 News Radio in Philadelphia and covers the four major city teams for ESPN Radio. He also anchors SportsCenter segments for ESPN Radio. Benkin also serves as the play-by-play voice for the Princeton hockey and lacrosse teams. He has written about Princeton sports for numerous University publications.

A Rowan graduate, Benkin and his wife Pam live in Burlington Township. They have two daughters, Lauren and Jessica.

Ross
Tucker

COLOR MAN

Ross Tucker, a former Princeton offensive lineman who played with the Buffalo Bills, Dallas Cowboys, Washington Redskins and New England Patriots, is in his second year as the football color radio man. Tucker also writes columns for CNN.com and is a contributor on Sirius NFL Radio and CN8.

Shirley Tilghman

PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY
EIGHTH YEAR
QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY '68

Shirley M. Tilghman, the nineteenth president of Princeton University, assumed office on June 15, 2001. She was appointed to the faculty of Princeton's Department of Molecular Biology in 1986 as the Howard A. Prior Professor of the Life Sciences. Two years later, she was named an investigator of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute. She chaired the University's Council on Science and Technology from 1993-2000, and served from 1998 to 2003 as founding director of Princeton's multi-disciplinary Lewis-Sigler Institute for Integrative Genomics. In 1996 she received a University President's Award for Distinguished Teaching.

President Tilghman, a native of Canada, received her Honors B.Sc. in chemistry from Queen's University in Kingston, Ontario, in 1968. After two years of secondary school teaching in Sierra Leone, West Africa, she obtained her Ph.D. in biochemistry from Temple University. She did postdoctoral studies at the National Institutes of Health, participating in cloning the first mammalian gene, and has served as an independent investigator at the Institute for Cancer Research in Philadelphia and an adjunct associate professor of human genetics and biochemistry and biophysics at the University of Pennsylvania.

A member of the National Research Council's committee that set the blueprint for the United States effort in the Human Genome Project, she also was one of the founding members of the National Advisory Council of the Human Genome Project Initiative for the National Institutes of Health. She has played a national leadership role on behalf of women in science and has promoted efforts to make the early careers of young scientists as meaningful and productive as possible.

President Tilghman is a member of the American Philosophical Society, the National Academy of Sciences, the Institute of Medicine, and the Royal Society of London. She currently serves as a trustee of the Jackson Laboratory, the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and is a director of Google Inc.

President Tilghman has two children, one of whom, Rebecca, graduated from Princeton in the Class of 2003.

Gary Walters

DIRECTOR OF ATHLETICS
15TH YEAR
PRINCETON '67

Gary D. Walters, who in a five-decade career as a student-athlete, coach, administrator and NCAA leader has established his voice as one of the most respected in college athletics, is in his 15th year as Director of Athletics at Princeton University. He recently earned the 2008 Northeast Region Athletic Director of the Year honor from the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics.

Walters oversees an athletic department that has won 153 Ivy League championships in his first 14 years, a total that is 54 more than the next highest Ivy school during that time. In addition to Princeton's success during his tenure, Walters recently completed a five-year run on the NCAA Division I men's basketball committee and spent the 2006-07 academic year as the committee chair.

Walters is a 1967 Princeton graduate who played point guard on the Tigers' 1965 NCAA Final Four men's basketball team, making him one of just two men who have played in the Final Four and gone on to be chair of the Division I committee. A three-year starter as a point guard on Princeton's basketball team, Walters was featured with teammate Chris Thomforde, now the president of Moravian College, on the cover of Sports Illustrated in February 1967 while leading that year's team to a 25-3 record, an NCAA tournament berth and a fifth-place finish in the national polls.

As chair of the committee in 2007, he oversaw an NCAA tournament that had all four No. 1 seeds and three of four No. 2 seeds reach the Elite Eight and three No. 1 seeds and a No. 2 seed reach the Final.

His national basketball work also included serving on the College Basketball Partnership, an initiative of NCAA president Myles Brand that was led by and featured major Division I coaches, administrators, and stakeholders.

Walters has led an athletic department that has won the Ivy League's unofficial all-sports standings and has produced at least one individual team or national champion every year of his tenure. The 2007-08 season was another successful one under Walters; Princeton won an Ivy League-best nine Ivy League titles and had 10 league players of the year. Several student-athletes, both current and former in Walters' Era, would exchange Orange and Black for their national colors in the 2008 Summer Olympics.

His legacy at Princeton will include his ability to identify young head coaching talent, one that has seen him hire no fewer than 14 coaches with no previous Division I head coaching experience who have gone on to win Ivy League or national championships. Among the coaches to whom he gave a first Division I opportunity are John Thompson III, who won three Ivy titles in four years at Princeton before taking Georgetown to the 2007 men's basketball Final Four; Scott Bradley, who has won five Ivy titles and eight Gehrig Division titles in baseball; Julie Shackford, the only coach to take an Ivy League school to the NCAA women's soccer Final Four; Roger Hughes, who led Princeton's football team to its first nine-win season in 40 years; Lori Dauphiny, architect of the most dominant women's open rowing boat in the history of the NCAA championships; and Kristin Holmes-Winn and Maureen Barron, who won four Ivy titles each in field hockey and softball.

Princeton teams have won 24 national championships in his first 14 years as director of athletics. During that time Princeton has fielded 33 teams in Ivy League sports, and 31 of those have won at least one league championship. In addition, 35 of the 38 Princeton varsity teams have played in postseason championship competition. A total of six Princeton teams have competed in the NCAA Final Four of their sport since he became AD, including four in the calendar year of 2004, tying Princeton with UCLA and Stanford for the most in Division I.

Princeton also finished in the Top 25 in the Directors' Cup in 1996, 1998, 2001 and 2002, making Princeton the only non-scholarship school ever to do so. Princeton is the highest-finishing non-scholarship school every year but two in the history of the Directors' Cup.

In addition to this on-field success, Walters has overseen a nearly complete renovation of athletic facilities, most notably the demolition of Palmer Stadium and the building of Powers Field at Princeton Stadium and Weaver Track and Field Stadium in its place. Other projects have included the construction of the Class of 1952 Stadium, the new squash courts in Jadwin Gym, the addition of 16 locker rooms to the Caldwell Field House, the renovation and expansion of the boathouse to the Shea Rowing Center, and aesthetic improvements to both Baker Rink and De-Nunzio Pool. The most current project is the building of the $14 million Myslik Field at Roberts Stadium, a state-of-the-art soccer stadium that opens this fall.

Walters' dynamic leadership has been acclaimed and nationally profiled in such journals as Sports Illustrated, Sports Business Journal, Athletic Management, The New York Times Magazine, Wall Street Journal and Athletic Business Magazine.

Walters is a believer in the philosophy of character-based coaching and the role that intercollegiate athletics, properly administered, plays in contributing to a student-athlete's holistic education. Toward that end, he created the Princeton Academic Athletic Fellows program, which links academic, athletic and social pursuits by identifying faculty members and administrators to serve in support roles for each team. Walters also created the Princeton Varsity Club, a unique support group geared toward providing broad-based assistance for the Tigers' 38 intercollegiate teams while stressing the ideals of performance, values and community. The PVC's Board of Directors is comprised of some of the most respected names in the Princeton athletic family, and among its other endeavors has been a speaker series that began with an address at Princeton by NCAA president Brand.

Walters has spearheaded and implemented a gender-neutral compensation structure for coaches and has overseen the development of the University's Office of Athletic Communications and Office of Athletic Relations. Among his other projects have been the planning and organization of the 1996-97 Faculty Symposia on Athletics and the development of the Varsity Student-Athlete Advisory Committee.

He has also seen four members of his administrative staff become Directors of Athletics, most recently Jim McLaughlin at Union in 2005. Former senior associate athletic director Jamie Zaninovich was named West Coast Conference Commissioner during the spring of 2008.

Walters has served as the chairman of the Ivy Committee on Administration and is an ethics fellow for the Institute of International Sport, an organization that in September 2007 named him as one of the "100 Most Influential Sports Educators in America." He was recently named to the advisory board for the Center for the Study of Sport in Society at Northeastern.

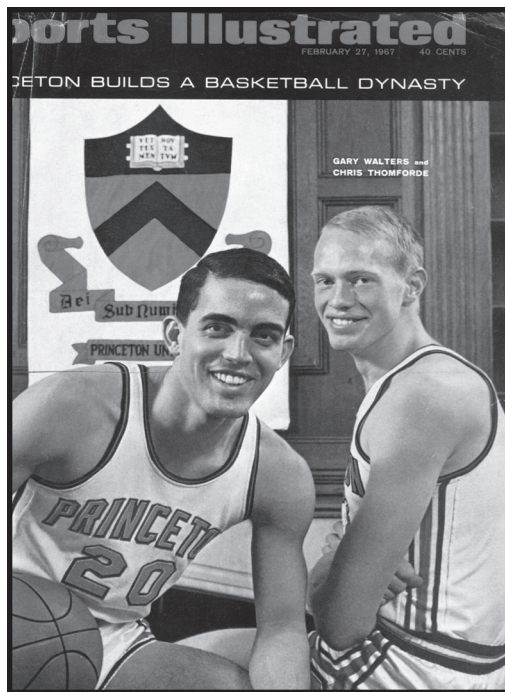

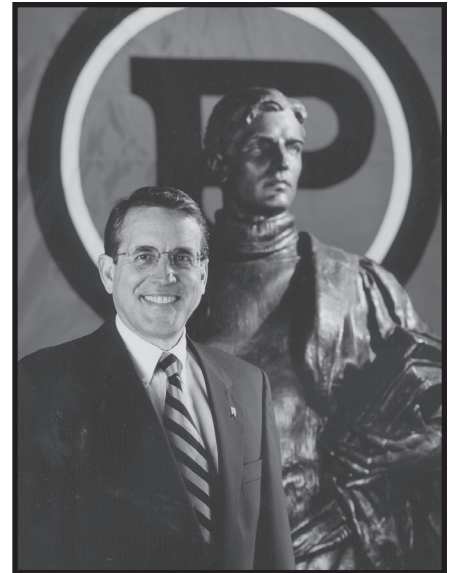

Walters became the youngest head basketball coach in NCAA history in 1970, when he took over the duties at Middlebury College. He then spent three years as head coach at Union College (where he coached former Tiger head basketball coach Bill Carmody) before returning to Princeton as an assistant coach in 1973. Walters also served as head coach at both Dartmouth College - where he was named New England Coach of the Year in 1976 - and Providence College. In 1980 Walters was selected to coach at the U.S. Olympic Trials. He also served as a color analyst on Big East men's basketball telecasts.

He joined Kidder, Peabody & Co. in 1981 as an investment representative. He left as a senior vice president and partner in 1990 to become senior partner of Woolf Associates Sports Management in Boston, and he then became managing director of Seaward Management, an investment advisory firm, in 1992. He was a three-year participant in the executive education program sponsored by the Securities Industry Association conducted at the Wharton School of Business. While at Kidder he served for three years, one as chair, on the New England NASD district business conduct committee, the regulatory body responsible for enforcing security regulations in over-the-counter markets.

Walters, who played high school basketball at Reading (Pa.) High under longtime Princeton coach Pete Carril, helped Princeton to two Ivy League titles and the 1965 NCAA Final Four. He was a first-team All-Ivy League selection and received the team's B.F. Bunn Trophy, "awarded to that member of the varsity team who through sportsmanship, play and influence has contributed most to the sport at Princeton."

Academically, Walters graduated from Princeton in 1967 with a BA degree in Psychology. As an undergraduate he co-authored, with Psychology professors Marvin Karlins and Thomas Coffman, a study entitled "On the Fading of Social Stereotypes: Studies in Three Generations of College Students," which was published in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology in 1969. This study has become widely cited in social psychology research as being a part of the "Princeton Trilogy," sequential studies that focused on ethnic stereotyping.

Walters and his wife, Susan, have three children: Liza, Nick and Matt. Liza graduated from Brown in 2003, while Nick graduated from Princeton in 2005. Matt is currently in the Class of 2011 at Union College.

Janet Smith
Dickerson

VICE PRESIDENT FOR CAMPUS LIFE

Janet Smith Dickerson, vice president for campus life at Princeton University, has oversight responsibility for undergraduate campus life, including the Office of Religious Life, the Department of Athletics, Princeton University Health Services, and the Office of the Dean of Undergraduate Students (which is responsible for matters relating to the conduct and discipline of undergraduates, as well as extracurricular activities), Frist Campus Center, and the Center for Community Service. Vice President Dickerson works closely with the dean of the college in matters related to the residential colleges and with the dean of the graduate school on specific issues of concern to graduate students. She is a member of the President's Cabinet and serves as secretary for the Student Life, Health and Athletics Committee of the Board of Trustees; has policy responsibility for the housing and dining programs as they affect undergraduates; represents Princeton in the Policy Committee of the Ivy League; and chairs the Undergraduate Life Committee and Safety Committee. She also is a member of the Committee on Examinations and Standings and the Council of Masters.

Before coming to Princeton, Vice President Dickerson served as vice president for student affairs at Duke University for nine years. She was dean of the college at Swarthmore College from 1981-1991, and associate dean and director of Academic Support Programs from 1976-1981. She was the founding director of the Supportive Services program at Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana, where she also was an associate dean of students and assistant professor of education from 1971-1976.

Vice President Dickerson received a B.A. in English from the Western College for Women in Oxford, Ohio (now Miami University), and an M.Ed. from Xavier University in Cincinnati. She did advanced graduate study in counseling psychology at the University of Pennsylvania and received honorary degrees from Xavier and Swarthmore. She has traveled and studied in the Middle East and was a Fulbright administrative fellow to Germany in 1997.

She currently serves on the Board of Trustees of the Princeton-Blairstown Center and McCarter Theatre and is an honorary member of the Class of 1965.

She is married and has three daughters.

Peter Quimby

DEPUTY DEAN

Peter Quimby has been the Associate Dean of the College since coming to Princeton in 2005. He will assume the title of Deputy Dean in July of this year. He has primary responsibility for all aspects of the undergraduate curriculum. In this capacity he oversees the work of the Princeton Writing Program, the McGraw Center for Teaching and Learning, and the Program in Teacher Preparation. He serves as the secretary of the Committee on the Course of Study, and chairs the Committee on Academic Technology. He also serves as Princeton Faculty Athletic Representative to the NCAA. Dean Quimby is the director of the Freshman Seminar Program and is responsible for overseeing the Community-Based Learning Initiative, which integrates research about community issues into the undergraduate curriculum.

Prior to Princeton, Quimby had been dean of Yale's Davenport College since 2001. In addition to overseeing academic affairs and student life for the 470-student college, he took on a range of university-wide administrative assignments at Yale. Those included coordinating the new Freshman Seminar Program and chairing a subcommittee of a working group dedicated to implementing other initiatives related to Yale's new curriculum. One recommendation called for the restructuring of the Yale College dean's office, with a new Office of Freshman Affairs to attend to the special curricular and advising needs of first-year students.

Quimby also served as director of undergraduate studies for the special divisional major (Yale's equivalent of independent concentration), as secretary of the Yale College Committee on Teaching and Learning and as a member of the Faculty Committee on Athletics.

From 1998 to 2001, Quimby was an administrator and teacher at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. He served as associate director and then assistant dean of the Pathways to Excellence Project, a set of campus-wide initiatives designed to improve the quality of undergraduate education at the university.

A 1989 magna cum laude graduate of Bowdoin College with a B.A. in government and Russian, Quimby earned an M.A. (1992) and a Ph.D. (1999) in political science from the University of Wisconsin-Madison. His teaching, at Wisconsin and Yale, has focused on Russian and comparative politics. His principal scholarly interest is in state-building, religion and politics in post-Soviet Russia and Ukraine.
