

When the great sport of college football began, Princeton was there. Some of the greatest teams in the 20th century wore the Orange and Black. The 1951 Heisman Trophy found room amidst the 28 national championships in the grand tradition of Princeton football.

The young men that will play this season are trying to add to the proud history of a program voted one of the 10 best in the sport's history.

Represented 26 Times In The College Football Hall Of Fame

Seniors Tim Boardman (l) and Rob Toresco shared the John P. Poe-Richard W. Kazmaier Trophy, the top honor given to a Princeton football player. While their 2007 seasons, when both earned All-Ivy recognition, were impressive, both were standout players throughout their careers.

Boardman won the Harland "Pink" Baker '22 Award as a freshman defensive lineman, but when the coaches needed him at linebacker, he made the transition as a sophomore. By his junior year, he led the Ivy League champion Princeton Tigers in tackles, a feat he would duplicate his senior season. Boardman earned first-team All-Ivy honors in 2007.

Toresco earned All-Ivy honorable mention as a senior, but his career was never defined by statistics. He was Mr. Versatility on the Princeton offense for the first three quarters, and he was Mr. Closer in the fourth quarter. Time and again, this gritty fullback took the ball on the final drive and picked up key first downs. His late touchdown in the 2006 finale iced a 27-17 win over Dartmouth and the Ivy League title.

Princeton's and college football's modern records begin with the 1937 season — the first year of official, standardized record-keeping by the NCAA. Therefore, most of college football's statistical records prior to 1937 are lost to history. Through responsible research, however, some records for that period have been validated. In recognition of those achievements and for historical purposes and a point of reference, pre-1937 performances that surpass a modern record also are listed and are indicated by an asterisk (*). Bold type denotes records established by active players. For a more complete listing of records, consult the Princeton all-sports record book.

2008 PRINCETON CAPTAINS

Brian Anderson made his first collegiate start at quarterback a memorable one, completing his first 11 passes and setting up the winning kick in overtime to lead Princeton to a 17-14 road win at Dartmouth. He earned the starting job during the spring preseason and impressed his teammates with his poise and leadership.

Adam Berry leads all active Princeton players with 43 catches. Roger Hughes considers Berry one of the most prepared and intelligent players he has coached, and his toughness will make him an impact player in the running game as much as his skill and desire will help him in the passing game.

Matt Koch has been part of the defensive line rotation since his sophomore year and grew into a leadership role last year. He is a nose guard who works tirelessly at the position. He made 37 tackles last season and came up with three turnovers, including a pair of fumble recoveries, and will lead the defense in 2008.

139 SEASONS OF PRINCETON FOOTBALL RESULTS

BETWEEN 1869 AND 1901, PRINCETON TEAMS WERE DRILLED INFORMALLY BY PLAYER-COACHES OR BY PLAYER-ALUMNI COMMITTEES.

139 YEARS OF TRADITION, CHAMPIONSHIPS AND OVERALL EXCELLENCE

Where It All Began
Princeton Still Great 135 Years Later

When 23 young men from Princeton signed over an open field in East Brunswick, NJ, one of the nation's first college football programs was born. They were not looking for glory, but for a place to play. There were no fans or polls, no trophies or awards, no press releases or banners. There were barely even rules. Just rough ideas of "game playing" from Princeton and Rutgers playing a new game for bragging rights and honor. And so, on November 6, 1869, college football was born.

Princeton has had five games, four goals in six goals, but quickly got overzealous and in a second game played a work game, under a distinctly different set of rules. Rules evolved separately at the two schools and Princeton would, for the most part, keep its identity.

Although, 135 years later, fans don't realize Princeton when talking about the B.C.S. and major bowl games, the Tiger won 28 national championships, more than any other school.

Twenty-one of those national championships came before 1950, when, at the behest of President Theodore Roosevelt, the rules were officially standardized, including the adoption of the forward pass - to make playing the game safer.

Even under the new rules, the Tigers were undefeated, earning the first national title of the modern era.

In 1911, sophomore Heisman Baker, who went on to capture the Orange and Black let, was named the first Heisman Trophy winner. Perhaps the best college football player of his era, Baker's name is forever linked to the Heisman Trophy.

Princeton football history that began to blossom upon Harvard's "Pud" Baker (1911), who led the Tigers to two national championships during his career. When his playing days ended, he returned to Princeton to coach for more than 40 years.

In 1922, sophomore Dick Kazmaier, who led the 1922 squad to the national championship during his career in the "Orange and Black" era, was named the Heisman Trophy winner. Heisman was named the Heisman Trophy winner in 1951, the year that Princeton captured an 11-point Heisman Trophy award. Princeton's success in the Heisman Trophy is a testament to the excellence of its players and coaches. The Heisman Trophy is awarded to the best college football player in the United States. Princeton has won the Heisman Trophy 11 times, more than any other school.

1951 — THE HEISMAN TROPHY

The last time the most hallowed individual trophy in all of sports went to an Ivy League football player was in 1951, when the most legendary name in the history of Princeton football starred for the Orange and Black.

Dick Kazmaier '52 led the nation in total offense and was the country's most accurate passer during his brilliant 1951 campaign. He led Princeton to a top ranking in the East and No. 6 national ranking.

His Heisman win was a runaway in record proportions. He was the first winner to reach four figures in total votes (1,777) and he was the first to win the Trophy by more than 1,000 points. He won all five sections of the vote (East, South, Midwest, Southwest and Far West), and he had more first-place votes (506) than every other candidate combined to receive. Tennessee running back Hank Lauricella finished second in the voting and had only 45 first-place votes.

One year earlier, Kazmaier played an instrumental role in leading Princeton to a share of the 1950 national championship (see chart below.)
